Wuebben Selected Deputy Director of Cold Regions Lab

HANOVER, N.H.—James “Jim” Wuebben of the U.S. Army Engineer Research and Development Center’s (ERDC) Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory (CRREL) in Hanover, N.H., was recently selected by Headquarters, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, for the position of CRREL Deputy Director.

“As the Deputy Director Jim will assist me in managing the Laboratory. He will direct and supervise the technical first-line managers. And he will oversee the execution of CRREL’s research and engineering technical program, manage the physical assets, and assist in the development of new and strategic research program areas for CRREL,” said Dr. Barbara Sotirin, CRREL Director.

A graduate of Michigan Technological University’s Master of Science in Civil Engineering program, Wuebben has been a member of CRREL’s technical staff as a research hydraulic engineer and supervisory civil engineer since 1975. He is also a New Hampshire Licensed Professional Engineer.

Wuebben resides in Plainfield, N.H.
